

VITAMINS & MINERALS

Vitamins: They are considered micronutrients, they are elements that are ingested in small quantities and are necessary to maintain a good physiological and metabolic activity of the organism. They are divided into liposoluble vitamins (soluble in fatty medium) and hydrosoluble vitamins (soluble in aqueous medium).

Minerals: Some are considered macronutrients and are those that are required in significant quantities (Ca, Cl, Mg, P, Na, K); and others are considered micronutrients and are those that are required in small amounts (Cr, Co, F, I, Fe, Mn, Se, Zn, Mo).
